 - g) By AD 614, the Christian community was no longer present in the city.
 - h) Under Onesimus, they began to dimension.
 - (1) Ignatius of Antioch wrote about the assembly under Onesimus.
 - (2) Under Onesimus, the assembly focused on orderly conduct, truthfulness, and freedom from heresy.
 - i) By the early second century under Polycrates, the assembly was completely lost.
 - (1) He was known for defending the tradition of observing the Passover on the fourteenth day of Nisan, rather than on the following Sunday.
 - (2) He resisted the Western influence of Rome on the Church.

 - 3. The synagogue of Satan (Revelation 2:9).
 - a) Satan is mimicking Christianity (2 Corinthians 11:15).
 - b) The synagogue of Satan is those who claim to take the place of the Jews.
 - 4. This assembly faces ten periods of severe persecution (Revelation 2:10).
 - a) Nero AD 64–68.
 - (1) Persecution of the Church was triggered by a great fire in Rome.
 - (2) It is recorded that he used Christians to light his garden.
 - (3) Peter and Paul were killed during Nero's reign.
 - (4) The Roman historian Tacitus provides the political context and the clear motive (scapegoating).
 - (5) The historian Suetonius provides corroboration of the state's hostile policy.
 - (6) Clement of Rome's writing in AD 95–96 provides the internal, eyewitness-adjacent verification of the suffering endured by the Christian community in Rome.
 - b) Domitian (duh-MISH-un) AD 81–96.
 - (1) The Church was persecuted because of its rejection of Domitian's claim of deity.
 - (2) Domitian's enforcement was centralized and aimed at consolidating absolute autocratic control.
 - c) Trajan (TRAY-jun) AD 112–117.
 - (1) Trajan provided a legal framework for the treatment of Christians, moving localized violence towards a formalized administrative stance.
 - (2) The persecution of Christian became a legal matter. Thus, explicit charges had to be stated, rejecting the previously accepted anonymous accusations.
 - (3) To demonstrate their rejection of Christianity, the accused had to make a sacrifice

- to the Roman gods.
- (4) It was the refusal of Christians to submit to the traditional way of the ancestors in the public ritual of state worship that constituted a crime worthy of death in the eyes of Roman law.
 - (5) Trajan institutionalized the reality that being a Christian in the Roman Empire was an act of civil disobedience.
 - (6) Trajan began legal warfare against the Church.
- d) Marcus Aurelius AD 161—180.
- (1) During Marcus' reign, the Roman Empire faced many catastrophes, which the local magistrates used to increase persecution of the Christians in an attempt to please their gods.
 - (2) The most noted instance of state-sanctioned bloodshed during the reign of Marcus occurred in Gaul.
 - (a) Local authorities explicitly encouraged popular violence, torture, and the execution of the Christian community.
 - (b) The Emperor's response to the governor of Gaul seeking guidance was effectively a death warrant for Christians.
 - (c) He ordered that those who confessed to being Christians should be executed, while those who recanted should be released.
 - (d) This legalized the mob-type of action against Christians and ensured that the "confession" itself was a capital offense.
 - (3) Marcus Aurelius's actions did not necessarily stem from an obsessive personal crusade against a specific theological sect, but rather from a cold, pragmatic commitment to the integrity of the Roman state.
 - (a) Marcus Aurelius viewed Christianity as a destabilizing force that threatened the fragile cohesion of an empire already on the brink of collapse.
 - (b) Marcus Aurelius set a dangerous precedent concerning when the state feels its existence is threatened.
- e) Septimius Severus (sep-TIM-ee-us seh-VEER-us) AD 202–210.
- (1) Septimius Severus persecuted the Church out of hatred.
 - (2) Septimius Severus issued a decree that specifically forbade conversion to either Judaism or Christianity.
 - (3) Since the Christian faith refused to intermingle with the Roman polytheistic system, the state aimed to isolate the Church to stop its growth.
 - (4) Under Septimius Severus, the state moved from simply executing "obstinate" individuals to implementing proactive policies designed to stop the organizational expansion of the Church.
 - (5) The state's attempt to criminalize instruction and conversion only served to strengthen the internal resolve and theology of the Church.
 - (6) Under Septimius Severus the state's persecution of the Church turned from legal to military.

- f) Maximinus the Thracian (mak-si-MY-nus the THRAY-shun) AD 235–238.
 - (1) His actions against the Church were designed to consolidate power.
 - (2) Maximinus Thrax was a soldier-emperor who rose through the ranks of the military.
 - (a) His reign was characterized by brutal purges of the Roman elite and a desperate need to secure the loyalty of the traditional Roman priesthods.
 - (b) His policy against the Church was not a codified, empire-wide law like the later edicts of Decius or Valerian, but rather a direct order to persecute the leaders of the Christian movement.
 - (3) Maximinus Thrax primarily focused on the clergy, systematically attempting to execute or exile the heads of the major Christian centers, aiming to cause a collapse of leadership and, consequently, the disintegration of the local congregations.
- g) Decius (DEE-shus) AD 250–251.
 - (1) Decius instituted the first empire-wide systematic attempt to eradicate the Church through forced apostasy.
 - (2) In early 250 AD, Decius issued an edict mandating that all Roman citizens perform a public sacrifice to the gods in the presence of a commission of local officials to receive a certificate (libellus) as proof of loyalty.
 - (3) Decius aimed to break the Church's internal cohesion and coerce it back into the Roman religious fold by forcing Christians to perform public acts of idolatry.
 - (4) The libellus turned every citizen into a potential agent of state enforcement.
 - (a) The COVID era of 2021 mimicked this type of citizen enforcement.
 - (b) Adherence to the government was forced by certification of immunization, which was in contrast to religious beliefs and government laws.
 - (c) There was a strong attempt by the state to eradicate religious exemption and medical freedom.
 - (d) The Covid era is not similar in persecution, only in the method of control.
 - (5) The leadership of the Church was targeted in an attempt to disintegrate the assemblies.
 - (6) When the threat of death did not yield compliance, the state employed sophisticated, rhythmic torture meant to break the resolve of the individual without immediately killing them, hoping to secure a public renunciation of Christ.
 - (7) Decius further moved the state from a legal persecution of Christians for local civil disobedience to an issue of war for the foundational identity of the empire itself.
- h) Valerian (vuh-LEER-ee-un) AD 257–259.
 - (1) Valerian (reigned 253–260 AD) accelerated the transition of the Roman state from an engine of sporadic legal harassment into a systematic program of state-sponsored dismantling of the Church as an institution.
 - (2) Following the shock of the Decian (DEE-shun) persecution, Valerian initially appeared tolerant, but his policy shifted drastically in 257–258 AD due to

- mounting pressure from the Persian threat and internal economic crises.
- (3) The Edict of 257 AD was intended to decapitate the Church's organization by attacking the leadership.
 - (a) Bishops, priests, and deacons were forced to offer sacrifice to the Roman gods or face exile.
 - (b) Christian assemblies were forbidden, and the use of cemeteries for gatherings was prohibited.
 - (4) The Edict of 258 AD brought total war on the Church.
 - (a) Bishops, priests, and deacons were to be executed immediately upon refusing the sacrifice.
 - (b) Christians of high social rank were stripped of their honors and property, even facing execution if they persisted in their faith.
 - (c) High-ranking women were to be stripped of their property and sent into exile.
 - (5) Valerian's policy was uniquely focused on the Church as a property-owning, organized entity.
 - (a) He understood that to kill the Church, one had to strike at its hierarchy and its holdings.
 - (b) By confiscating the property of the nobility and the burial grounds, the Roman state attempted to render Christianity homeless and impoverished.
- i) Aurelian (aw-REE-lee-un) AD 270–275.
- (1) Aurelian's primary religious objective was to establish the cult of Sol Invictus (the Unconquered Sun) as the supreme state religion.
 - (2) Aurelian was not interested in reviving the traditional, fractured pagan pantheon, which he saw as insufficient for imperial unity.
 - (3) Aurelian sought to create a state-sponsored "solar" monotheism.
 - (4) Since the Church also presented a coherent, universal, and "monotheistic" structure, Aurelian's state cult was effectively competing for the same ideological space that Christianity occupied.
 - (5) Initially, Aurelian was relatively indifferent to the Church, maintaining the status quo of the "Little Peace" that followed the collapse of Valerian's persecutions.
 - (6) Aurelian's attitude toward Christianity changed toward the end of his reign when he directly intervened in the politics of the Church.
 - (a) The pivotal moment for Aurelian's involvement in church affairs was a result of Paul of Samosata, the Bishop of Antioch, who had been deposed by a synod of bishops for heresy.
 - (b) Paul refused to vacate the church building, appealing to Aurelian to decide between the two factions.
 - (c) Aurelian deferred the decision to the bishops in communion with the See of Rome, which shocked the Roman Administration.
 - (d) By involving himself in the case of Paul of Samosata, he established a precedent where the Roman state could act as an enforcer of Church discipline.

- (7) The persecution of the Church transitions from military might to administrative oversight and influence.
- j) Diocletian (dye-oh-KLEE-shun) and Galerius (guh-LEER-ee-us) AD 303–324.
 - (1) The persecution under Diocletian and his Caesar, Galerius, known as the “Great Persecution” (303–311 AD), was the final, largest, and most systemic attempt by the Roman Empire to eradicate Christianity.
 - (2) It was a concerted effort by the Tetrarchy (TET-rar-kee, Rule by four) to re-establish the absolute, divine authority of the Roman state by purging the “Christian infection” from its ranks, military, and institutions.
 - (3) In the First Edict, Churches were to be demolished, and all Christian scriptures and liturgical books were to be surrendered and burned.
 - (4) In the Second Edict, all Christian clergy were to be arrested and imprisoned.
 - (5) In the Third Edict, a general amnesty was offered to clergy who were willing to offer sacrifice to the Roman gods, but those who refused faced brutal torture.
 - (6) The Fourth Edict was the most radical step.
 - (a) It mandated that every citizen in the empire, regardless of sex or social status, must publicly offer sacrifice to the Roman gods.
 - (b) Failure to perform a sacrifice resulted in execution, forced labor in mines, or mutilation.
- 5. This was the predominant condition of the Church from AD 170 to 312.
 - a) The majority of the Church was killed by persecution.
 - b) Persecution also brought strength in doctrinal matters.
 - c) Those who are believers will receive the crown of life (Revelation 2:10).
 - (1) Only the Church receives the victor’s wreaths
 - (2) The overcomer is the one who believes in Jesus (1 John 5:5).

 - a) There were faithful and held strong to Christ's name (character) during the day when Antipas was a faithful martyr (Revelation 2:13).

 - (2) Antipas is a term related to a position like a father.
 - b) Satan is the prince of the air and governs the world system (Ephesians 2:2).
 - c) Christianity becomes the state religion.
 - d) Constantine set the stage for the state to effectively govern the Church.
 - (1) The Edict of Milan in 313 AD ended the state-sponsored persecution of the Church.
 - (2) Through providing the Church with imperial patronage, tax exemptions, and resources to build, he integrated the Church into the Roman political order.
 - (3) This favorable influence made the Church susceptible to state influence and the lure of political corruption.
 - (4) The Council of Nicaea in 325 AD displays this influence due to Constantine's involvement in arbitrating ecclesiastical disputes.
 - e) The way of Balaam enters the Church (Revelation 2:14).
 - (1) The merchandizing of saints for political prestige and wealth.
 - (2) Balaam loved the wages of unrighteousness (2 Peter 2:15).

 - c) It devastated Christian populations, churches, and holy sites in the Levant, Anatolia, Mesopotamia, and beyond.
 - d) It was one of the most destructive wars of late antiquity.

- (2) These types of stones were used for casting votes (Acts 26:10).
 - (3) This stone carries a judicial weight—the stone is the token of vindication of the grace believer.
- 5. This was the predominant condition of the Church from AD 312–606.
